

MUTUAL MATERIALS

“Mutual Materials is dedicated to the Pacific Northwest,” says president Kendall Anderegg. “We are a local company that is committed to our community.” What began as a humble brick plant in Seattle during the 1900s is today the largest supplier of masonry and hardscape products in the region. The choice of designers, architects, home builders and homeowners alike, Mutual Materials offers everything from bricks to pavers, retaining wall blocks and natural stone. “What is inspiring is the ability to create multiple destinations in a landscape,” Anderegg says. “Today’s hardscape provides diversity in the number of outdoor living projects possible. From patios, terraced gardens and winding stone paths to raised gardens, fireside chat spaces and a private reading oasis, outdoor living is moving beyond the immediate backyard.”

“At Mutual Materials, we build beauty that lasts.”

TRENDING PROJECTS

Well-designed outdoor spaces are inviting and deliver on their intended use with style. What begins with a foundational element, such as a stone patio, has the potential to become any designer entertainment area, depending on the décor and functional elements added.

ANDEREGG'S TOP PROJECTS

Outdoor kitchens and living rooms. Moving beyond simple built-in grills to design luxury living rooms and entertainment spaces.

Creating multiple private outdoor destinations in a landscape, such as relaxation nooks, fire pits or small gardens connected by paths.

1. Terraced patios carved into a hillside overlook a scenic view. Landscape by Dreamscapes, using Mutual Materials Terra Villa pavers and Celtik Wall blocks. 2. This raised stone patio was designed by Dakara Landscape Design with Mutual Materials TuscanStone.
